Age group: 1+

Feeding babies can be a hard job, isn't it?! And what about talking? It's not as simple as it might seem at first glance. This is a book supporting speech development and expanding vocabulary. It was written by a speech and language therapist, who tailored the choice of words and the length of sentences to the needs of small children. Theme of this book is food, because feeding is one of the first routines of our little ones. It is predictable for them, and it is easy to learn during them.

Boardbook • Pages: 28 • Type:
Haptic + game • Age group: 4-7

This book is designed for the first meeting with the letters and their sounds. Children can feel the letters, try out the hand stroke, just like when we write in the sand. At the same time, it is a game where the kids name things starting with the letters, which provides opportunities to develop imagination. Pre-school children are spontaneously interested in letters and it is good to encourage them to be. Research has shown that children who know at least a few letters and sounds before starting school find it easier to learn to read later on.

Type: Graphic novel Age group:
For adults

Startled and sweating, Samuel wakes up from a nightmare. He looks around and sits up, still trembling, but he cannot escape the look he instantly feels upon him. It's there. That dog. The dog he never wanted but is now stuck with him. The dog he didn't want but now has to take care of. The dog that reminds him of everything. Her dog. Her stupid dog. On top of that, there's an endless workload, a dissatisfied client, unbearable stomach pain, neglected friendships, and pissed-off neighbors. And one broken heart.

Leadings Slovak comics artist Dávid Marcin has illustrated and told an autofictional story about a friendship that doesn't need many words. A paw is enough. And a well-thrown ball.

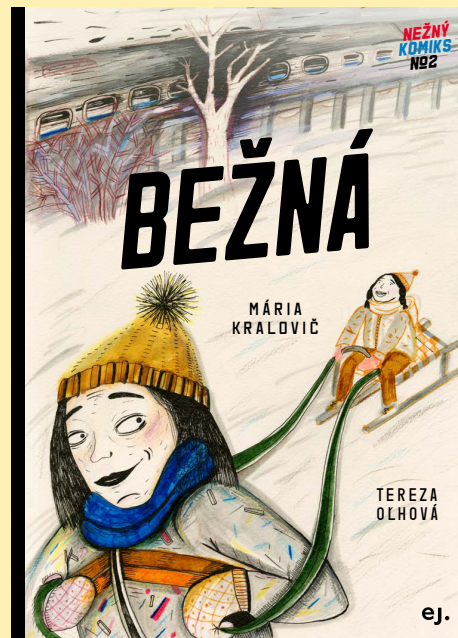

A moving portrayal of the bond between a man and the dog that changes his life.

Script: Daniel Majling
Art: Jozef Glaba

Jana is a girl of two faces. In the morning, she is an obedient granddaughter of a Communist functionary; at night, she is a rebellious Depeche Mode fan experiencing her first love. It is 16.9.1989 and a student demonstration for better education is planned to take place in Bratislava.

The Velvet Revolution had its ordinary days and everyday problems, too. Teenage girl Lucia lives in a housing estate in the town of Martin and looks at the world from the eighth floor of a grey block of flats.

Something must have happened in the city! All the adults have gone crazy and are running around the streets. Some rejoice, others shake their heads in disbelief. P-R-D is a bit crazy story about a day, when all the roads in Bratislava led to the SNP Square Boris spent the summer holidays in 1989 with his grandma. Suddenly, rumours began spreading in the village where she lived that children disappear under unexplained circumstances.

CARPATHIANS!

KARPATY!

This beautifully written book is full of stories, facts and thoughts about real and made-up landscape

Text: Ján Púček • Art: Kristína Mičová • Year: 2022 • Format: 13 x 18 cm, Hardcover • Pages: 260 • Type: Fiction + Nonfiction

The borders of this landscape are not fixed. They move somewhere between reality and dream. Children, rovers, pilgrims, wood-fellers, earls, monks, inventors, aviators, philosophers, and writers meet there. And finally, ordinary people. In this book you will find many stories, observations, notes, and reflections. History and present. Fact and fiction. Violence and tenderness. Spring in bloom and trees felled by snow. And if you want, it will serve you as a guide to the Little Carpathians, it definitely makes you wander somewhere.

Short stories, some of them connected with each other, all of them connected to the everyday life happening around us.

Text: Ján Púček • Year: 2022 • Format: 13 x 18 cm, Hardcover • Pages: 260 • Type: Fiction

Behind the wall of an apartment, something is happening, that sounds like war. An old man's trip to the store feels like a fight for survival. A conversation while picking summer apples becomes a journey deep into the past. A large dumpster standing on the street tells us the most about the life that once played out in an abandoned house. And a woman whose shoes fall apart during an exhausting hike tells us, how to settle down in an unfamiliar place.
